Glossary

EA Infoport can display the Enterprise Architect repository dictionary (this is standard EA functionality). The dictionary consists of a term, a type (general dictionary, product dictionary, etc.), and its meaning. It is particularly useful for explaining the meaning of abbreviations used. Glossaries can be edited directly in Infoport or in Enterprise Architect. The glossary is displayed as a filterable list. It is therefore possible to search for a certain type of terms or to full-text search for the occurrence of a certain word. In order to create, edit and delete the glossary, the user must be assigned the permission "Portal Administrator, Repository Administrator or Glossary Editor".

Creating a Glossary

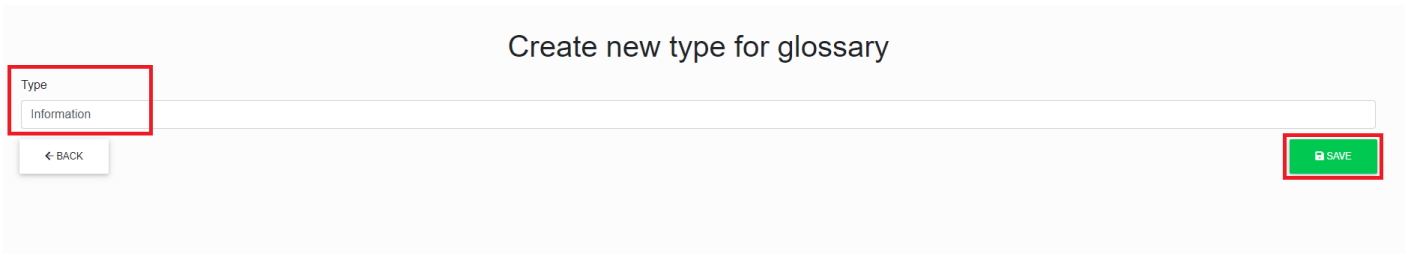

To create a glossary, a user must be assigned the "Portal Administrator, Repository Administrator, or Glossary Editor" permission.

After clicking on the "Create" button, the user is redirected to the "Create Glossary" table. The table can be filled with the term, type and meaning.

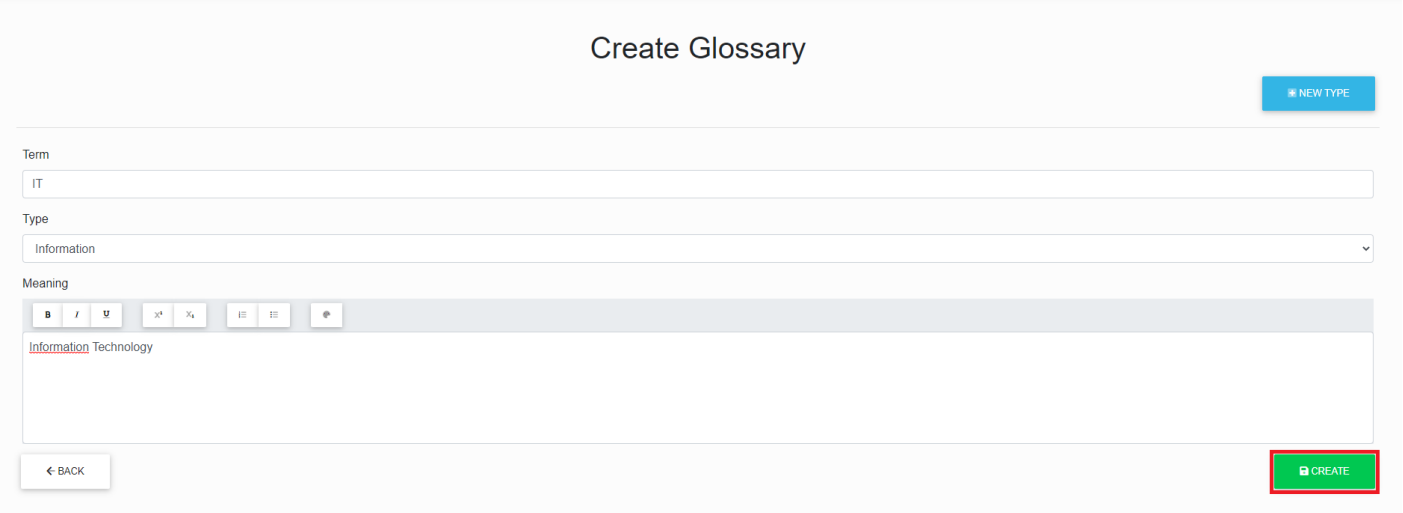

To create a new type, the user clicks on the "New Type" button. After displaying the table and filling in the type, the user clicks on the "Save" button.

After saving, the user is redirected back to the table to create the glossary, where they can see the newly created type by clicking the arrow next to the type.

After filling in the term and meaning, the user can create the glossary by clicking on the "Create" button.

After creating a glossary, the user is redirected back to the glossary overview table, where the message "Successfully created" is displayed and a row with the new glossary appears.
